Tips. Keep things simple: don't try to achieve too much too soon, or expect your learners to either. They don't know what you know and they need time to assimilate new skills and knowledge and to understand the how and why of this new learning.. You will find you may need to keep repeating and recapping things, which might be frustrating at first, but it will help learning to take place.

Tips - Ann Gravells Ltd (UK)

Using different teaching and learning approaches and activities will help learning to take place, and they should include using technology wherever possible. Think of these approaches as the techniques which can enable learners to be actively engaged during the session and not just passively listening to you talking.They should be fit for purpose, i.e. to enable learning to take place.
